The men from Myrrhee: ‘a place with many old people and tall trees’

Evan Evans, Hobart.

Myrrhee is a rich agricultural locality, situated approximately midway between Wangaratta and Mansfield in the foothills of the north-east Victorian highlands. Myrrhee lacks a pub, post office or store, but there is the Myrrhee State Primary School (which proudly celebrated its centenary in 1985), a Memorial Hall and a community recreation centre. The Memorial Hall contains the two conventional honour boards to those who have served Australia in war. The Myrrhee School also contains a special pictorial Honour Roll as it nestles in its ‘crick’1 between the Fifteen Mile and Boggy Creeks.

Mt Bellevue is the area’s high point, which sits roughly in the middle of the Myrrhee district. This was the high point that the explorers Hume and Hovell climbed when they passed through the district on their 1824-25 expedition from Sydney to Geelong. They reported, Halfway up this mountain the stone is of the worst quality, but on the top the stone has a portion of lime in it. The soil is of excellent quality and the grass and herbage is equal to any in the Murrumbidgee. [Hume and Hovell Expedition, 1824].2,3

This ‘red dirt’, either on the hill tops or washed into the valleys to form alluvial deposits, can bountifully grow anything from cereals, hops, tobacco and potatoes, or can sustain grazing stock and dairying. In more recent times, fine wine grapes have become prominent. The district’s relatively consistent rainfall, typically in excess of 1 000 mm per year, ensures that the district’s production is consistent by Australian standards.

As squatters, from 1853 the Evans family once farmed the 60 000 acre ‘Whitefield’ run which encompassed much of the district of Myrrhee. The Whitefield run’s fragmentation was induced through a series of Crown Lands Alienation Acts and Crown Lands Occupation Acts that were introduced between the 1860s and 1880s. Along with substantial, but ultimately futile, forays into stations in the Hillston district of NSW due to the ravages of drought, rabbits and wild dogs, this winnowed the family’s holdings back to John Evans’ ‘Redcamp’ property on the Boggy Creek and the ‘Manahsee’ property on the Fifteen Mile Creek, run by his oldest son Jack [below right, standing right]. The Evans family was part of those risk-taking generations that pioneered modern Australia.

The patriarch of the family, John Evans, and his wife Eleanor Lucy (nee Whitty), had eleven children: nine boys and two girls. Unfortunately, the oldest child and daughter succumbed to diphtheria at nearly three years, but the remainder of their children survived into adulthood. It was then one of the New Testament’s ‘Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse’ – war – took its tithe on both the Evans family and the Myrrhee district.

It is therefore reasonable to conclude that Myrrhee was a good crick. Marion Flanigan, an elder of the Myrrhee district recounts that shortly after marrying her husband Ian and coming into the district, his grandmother sagely commended her for choosing to live in an area with many old people and tall trees.
A fair question would be: why would a man willingly leave such a fortunate place? The answer, of course, would be to protect the place and the people they loved. The reality of industrialised war would soon intrude on these enviable intentions for most of the men, such as my great uncle, Signaller 2399 Francis (‘Ken’) Evans (51st Bn, KIA 13/10/1917, position #30 on pictorial roll of honour, bottom of page, right), who confided in a letter to his mother on 22 March, 1917:

All we want now is for the infernal war to end so as we can go to our dear homes in the only country in the world for me, Australia. However, all will be well yet Mother dear & try not to worry too much as 1917 ought to see the end of it.

The Great War would come and rudely interrupt the industrious agrarian idyll of the Myrrhee district. In total, 55 men who had attended the Myrrhee School or were associated with the district signed up to serve in the AIF and were later honoured on the Myrrhee Primary School pictorial honour roll. An inclusive net was cast for the roll, with an Englishman from Gloucester, 2nd Lieutenant Roy Bailey included (#35, KIA 5/1/1918, near Cambrai).

Roy spent 18 months in total in Australia and specifically four months as a teacher at the Myrrhee Primary School where [he] made himself highly popular. A newspaper reported that Roy left Australian in January 1915 to enlist in England, and from where he was initially sent to South Africa where he fought with the Umvoti Mounted Rifles, seeing action in what was then German South West Africa. At the successful conclusion of this foray, Bailey then returned to England to take up a commission with the Royal Marines, 1st Battalion, in June 1917.

Conversely, Myrrhee man, Sergeant Henry Simmonds (#49) appears to have left Australia for England on 3 December, 1906. He then enlisted in the British Army, first as a corporal in the 1st Kent Cycling Battalion, later transferring as a sergeant to the Queen’s Own Royal West Kent Regiment. His brother, Gunner 19822 Gilbert Simmonds (#11), enlisted into the 8th Field Artillery Brigade in Melbourne. Both brothers survived the war, with Gilbert being discharged with shell shock on 30 April, 1918, which was presumably sustained during the battles of Third Ypres, better known as Passchendaele. Henry was discharged in England after the war and emigrated to Canada. In 1932, he represented Canada in sailing (Star class) at the 1932 Los Angeles Olympic games but did not win a medal.

Of the 55 men, there is only one that I have not been able to properly link to enlistment or RSL records. He is, by his photos, an older man (30-40 years), Private R Rodman (*18). Rodman was presumably also a veteran of the Boer War.

Two other men, Private Leonard Forge (*51) and Private Leonard Patterson (*53) enlisted but had the bad luck (or perhaps in retrospect, good luck), of having disabling training accidents, resulting in their discharge from service in Australia. [There was a Private Reuben Rodman who enlisted from Kyabram in January 1916; perhaps he too suffered an incapacitating injury or sickness after enlistment?]

QMS James E Kidgell (*13) is another man who served in the Boer War and then stayed in South Africa. During WWI he enlisted in the South African Army and fought the Germans in Africa. In 1920, he returned to Myrrhee with his South African wife, Constance, to the family’s ‘Lumeah’ property. They had twins (Ian and Cecil) who both served in WWII. Flying Officer J Ian Kidgell (190 Squadron, RAF) was a bomber pilot and was killed on 21 November, 1944, when his Short Stirling bomber was shot down by a ‘German intruder’ as he was returning to base.

In Myrrhee, the average enlistment age of the men was 26 years and two months, with the majority enlisting during 1916 (29 men) and 1915 (18 men). There were others who tried to enlist but their age and parental objections delayed them (Pte 6414 Daniel Nolan, 22nd Bn, *55) or like my grandfather Evan Evans, who had suffered football injuries to his knees, resulting in his enlistment being rejected despite multiple attempts. The men were enlisted into a range of AIF units across the service, from infantry to light horse, artillery, engineers/pioneers and ambulance, with one of the Handcocks (Pte 7568 Fred Handcock, *44) being allocated to the tunnellers. Overall, the 37th Battalion was the most popular ‘Myrrhee battalion’ with 11 men being allocated to it.

The downside for the district’s pride in the numbers of men enlisting was the inevitable magnitude of the losses. In total, 13 men were killed in action, three died of wounds received in action and a further two were lost to sickness (influenza/pneumonia, malaria). As would be expected, there were a number of the men discharged as a result of wounding (including gassing), as well as a few cases of severe shell shock.

With the district’s significant contribution to WWI in terms of men, it was not surprising that the district decided to produce a memorial beyond the conventional honour roll. This special memorial took the form of the pictorial honour roll for ‘Scholars of the Myrrhee State School No. 2677 and Residents of the District’ [previous page].

Despite canvassing a range of Handcock, Evans and Flanigan Myrrhee octogenarians and current staff at the Myrrhee School, I have not been able to ascertain the details of the committee who commissioned the honour roll. However, a short article in the ‘Benalla Standard’ (6 January, 1922) reports it was unveiled by Mr R Cook MP on 22 December, 1921.

A small bronze plaque in the shape of an ‘artist’s palette’ used to be on the board. This plaque probably had the maker on it but it went missing sometime during the last century.

Marion Flanigan recounts that the decision to include all those men broadly associated with the district, not just those who attended the Myrrhee School, was somewhat contentious at the time. However, I am grateful the committee used this inclusive approach. The consensus of the current Myrrhee elders is that board was commissioned by the Myrrhee School Committee in the early 1920s and that it was paid for in the traditional way, that is, by working bees to cut firewood, selling raffle tickets and fundraising by social events.

Commissioning of a pictorial honour roll to commemorate the service of the district’s men appears to have been relatively rare. I was aware of only three other such honour rolls in Australia (described in the following paragraphs), but have since found others [see endnote 14].

A smaller pictorial honour roll was made for the Meadow Creek Primary School. Under the banner, Our ANZAC Heroes and a portrait of King George V, are presented the uniformed portraits of 25 men. Interestingly four of those men, L/Cpl Arnold Forge (*23), Gnr Clifford Haynes (*6), Pte Paul Haynes (*1, KIA 9/4/1918, Le Hamel), and Pte Henry Wallace (*46) are shared with the Myrrhee Honour Roll.

A similar but far larger Honour Roll to that of the Myrrhee School’s is the magnificent pictorial honour roll in the ANZAC Rooms of the Coal Creek Heritage Village in Korumburra, Gippsland. This honour roll board was produced by local Korumburra photographer, Mr A Pam, who presented it to the people of Korumburra on Armistice Day, 11 November, 1920. It was originally presented to be hung in the Korumburra Primary School, and within its 6 foot by 4 foot frame it contains 271 portraits, of which eight are those of local dignitaries, with the remaining 262 being those of Diggers who served during WWI.[6]
Another is the Willunga (SA) pictorial honour roll [below], which is a feature of the Australian War Memorial’s ‘After the War’ exhibition (from 5 October, 2018, for one year). This honour roll presents the pictures of 64 servicemen from WWI from the Willunga area (near Maclaren Vale).

These pictorial rolls, and other like them, are very important, not only as an exquisite tribute to the men who served, but as a resource to those of us looking to match names with verified photos of the Diggers.

The Willunga (South Australia) Honour Roll Board (Picture AWM) which will feature in the ‘After the War’ exhibition later in 2018. The board was produced with funds provided by Willunga’s ‘Cheer-Up Girls’ and was for permanent exhibition in the Willunga Agricultural Hall. Willunga is in SA’s Maclaren Vale that hosts the ‘Queen’s stage’ of the Tour Down Under cycling race each year.

The Handcock brothers occupy a special place on the Myrrhee Honour Roll. My great uncle, Captain Gerald Evans (‘12) wrote to his mother from France on 11 June, 1916: The Handcocks must be aggressive, six of them going! And that was before a further two brothers enlisted over the coming months. Presumably, Gerald had seen an article on this special contribution in the local paper, ‘The Wangaratta Chronicle’. Newspapers, although several months old, were like gold to the men in France to keep in touch with news from back home, so were eagerly shared around.

The Handcock boys c1915 in civilian clothing.

Overall, Charles and Harriett Handcock who commenced hop-growing in 1893 on the Upper 15 Mile Creek Road, Myrrhee, contributed eight sons to the AIF. They were, in order of enlistment: Pte Jack (*39, 7th Bn), Spr Bert (*41), Pte Ralph (*37), Pte Frank (*42), L/Cpl Charles (*40), Pte 1846 Henry (*34), Pte 7568 Fred (*44) and Pte 2634 Richard (*47) [see photo previous page]. With eight sons enlisting for the war, Charles and Harriett’s family is thought to have made the greatest single-family contribution from Australia, and perhaps the Empire.

Other Myrrhee families were also significant contributors to the AIF, including the Forge family with five: L/Cpl William (*2), Pte Leslie (*17), L/Cpl Arnold (*23), Pte Walter (*24) and Pte Leonard (*51), who all returned safely to Myrrhee. The Kidgells gave L/Cpl Eric (*4), Cpl William (*9, KIA 6/8/1916 at Pozieres), QMS James (*13) and Dvr Percival (*29). Also with four sons serving were the Pattersons, with Cpl Archie (*7), Pte John (*18, DOW 7/5/1917 at Bullecourt), Farrar Sgt Alex (*31) and Pte Allan (*53).

On the night of 22 March, 1916, a farewell function was held for 11 men of the 37th Battalion in Myrrhee: Cpl W Jarrott (*10), and Ptes J Leslie (*26), W Forge (*2), C Handcock (*40), H Handcock (*34), R Stickels (*38), A Patterson (*7), H Bridger (*14), J Jarrott (*15), L Forge (*17) and D Bryan (*54). Each man was presented with an exquisite, gold fob medal inscribed with their names, and on the reverse side, From Myrrhee Residents [left].

Henry Handcock’s grandson, Neville Handcock, is still growing hops on the family property, which is no mean feat given the vicissitudes of the hop market, particularly over the past 30 years. It was a visit with Henry Handcock’s two surviving sons, Ernie and Vic Handcock, who proudly suggested that I view the Myrrhee School Honour Roll. Being allocated to the near by Moyhu Primary School, I had not seen it while growing up in the area.

Commencing below are the portraits and details of the men on the Myrrhee Roll of Honour.

In the media of the day, the Handcock family was held up as the epitome of loyalty and patriotism for Australia and the Empire. After the seventh son (Fred) enlisted, ‘The Age’ (6/7/16) elevated the family as an example to slackers and trade union strikers, while the ‘Wangaratta Chronicle’ (21/4/17) reported that Mr Charles Handcock was presented with a handsome solid marble clock as an expression of appreciation and admiration for the sacrifices they have made in giving their sons so freely and willingly in response to their Country’s Call. The clock was donated to the Wangaratta Historical Society Museum in 1967.

Unfortunately, some of the Handcock boys eventually made the supreme sacrifice for King and Country. Private Albert John (Jack) Handcock (*39), 7th Battalion, was the family’s first loss, killed in action 2 May, 1915, on Gallipoli. Jack also had the unfortunate distinction of being the first of the Myrrhee district men to lay down their life for their country. For the Handcocks, Jack’s loss was bookended by the loss of L/Cpl Charles Handcock (*40), 37/38th Battalion who died of pneumonia (following influenza) in Abbeville, France, on the penultimate day of the war (10/11/18). He was the last of the Myrrhee men to die during WWI. The other Myrrhee man to die of illness was Trooper Edward Bryan (*54) who died of malaria in Egypt on 26 August, 1918.

Three of the Handcock boys were wounded during the war. Most seriously wounded on 6 October, 1917, during the Battle of Third Ypres (Passchendaele) was Pte Frank Handcock (*42). He was also wounded at Pozieres on 8 August, 1916. Gunshot wounds resulted in his right leg being amputated above the knee and one of his arms being paralysed. In a letter to the ‘Wangaratta Chronicle’ (20/2/18), Frank put on a brave face to say, it is amusing to see the chaps trying to use their artificial legs, and that he was anxious to get one to see how I get on. Back then physical wounds and severe shell shock (initially begrudgingly) were attended to, but nobody had even thought of post-traumatic stress disorder (PTSD). For Frank, the yearly readjustment of his leg was an agonising annual ordeal. Tragically, Frank took his own life 15 years later, just before his annual adjustment, leaving a widow and four young children behind (‘The Argus’, 24/2/33). He was by no means alone in this fate.

The majority of the Myrrhee boys enlisted after September 1915, so only around one-fifth of the men had the opportunity to serve on Gallipoli. In some respects, this was fortunate, as on Gallipoli the Anzacs spent long stretches in the trenches, where food and water supplies were of poor quality, and diseases such as diarrhoea and enteric were rife. Commenting on this ‘good’ fortune, Captain Gerald Evans (12) wrote to his mother, while he was in the trenches near Fromelles (17/5/16):

The work is fairly strenuous here but they take us out for a spell when we have been here for a while, so it is very different to Gallipoli where they had to stay in the trenches for months on end on bad food; the food is good here.8

Still, as many of the Myrrhee men were to later find, the frequency and density of shells would be far greater than Gallipoli at places such as Pozieres, Bullecourt and Passchendaele.

One of the Myrhee boys who did get to serve briefly on Gallipoli was Sergeant Bill Usherwood (*20), a good friend of Gerald Evans, who had a particularly interesting time just getting to Gallipoli. Gerald’s letter to his mother described the boat trip (29/11/15):
The boat that Bill Usherwood went across in was torpedoed but only a few men were lost [HMT Southland, en route Egypt to Lemnos]. There are three officers with us now who were on the boat, the men behaved wonderfully & the ships stokers & engineers rushed the boats. The captain shot several of them.

Lieut Pearce MC [left, later Capt, 21st Bn, KIA 4/10/17] who went through the same school of instruction as I did, called for volunteers & went down & kept the engines going & they managed to beach there prematurely.

As described by a cobber (in a letter that has ended up in the Redcamp Archives):

> Dear Mr Usherwood,
> Your letter inquiring for any news which I know concerning your brother and my mate [Sgt Tom Usherwood] … Your brother Tom and myself have been mates from when we went into Broadmeadows together and as I had the next section to him we were very seldom apart … We were fairly lucky for some time and after the first attack we reached our objective with slight loss, the five NCOs of the platoon still going strong. The last words Tom said to me, expecting orders, said to me, “It’s a stiff job and has to be done, and we’ll do it.” We did it but I’ll never forget that night … The last I saw of good old Tom, he was doing splendid work getting his men forward and digging in. It was soon after this that one of the other NCOs saw him wounded. I wish with all my heart that I could give you more cheerful news but I know that should I ever fall my last wish would be that my dear people shouldn’t be kept in suspense. I cannot in anyway say anything else other than that your brother died a good soldier’s and man’s death.

Letter from an unknown mate of Bill Usherwood’s, dated 27 May, 1917.

For many of the Myrrhee men, time out of the line in Egypt and at the Western Front enabled the catching up with various cobbles in the same or other units. Shortly before being killed in action at Messines, Belgium, on 9 July, 1917, CSM William Jarrott (#10) wrote the following letter to his parents, which was paraphrased in the ‘Wangaratta Chronicle’ (7/7/17):

He says he has just been in heavy engagement in which he received a slight wound to the face. His company received special mention for bravery and he was promoted to Warrant Officer. He was sending home a souvenir which he took from a pack he seized while making a raid on an enemy trench. Charlie (#40) and Henry (#34) Handcock, Leslie (#17) and Arnold (#23) Forge, Jim Leslie (#26, KIA 20/7/1917) and Horace Bridger (#14) are all with him [in the 37th Bn]. The latter two are now corporals. He speaks of the severity of the winter which lasts for six months in this part of the world, and despite all the clothes he had on he felt the cold severely. He says he was in the best of spirits and going strong.

As can be seen from his Myrrhee ROH portrait, and in a later portrait in the AWM collection [right, AWM P05248.065], CSM William Jarrott (*10) was solidly built, like most of the Jarrott family. The picture of his brother, Private John Jarrott (*15), shows a much more slightly built and younger man. In a letter to his mother, Gerald Evans remarked on John’s suitability for war (29/10/16):

_Think I told you young Jarrott was with this battalion now, poor kid. Tommy should have kept him on the crick for a couple more years, he is not developed enough for this game._

Gerald’s assessment was accurate, as John’s service record shows a series of illnesses and time recovering in English hospitals. However, John stuck out the war and served as well as he could.
Being but a proverbial stone’s throw from Greta and (Ned) Kelly country, there was, of course, Kelly connections for the Myrrhee men. Continuing the misfortune of the Kelly family, Private Frederick Forster (21, KIA 15/4/17) was the son of Ned’s sister, Kate. Kate died in 1898 when she tragically drowned in a billabong of the Lachlan River near Forbes in NSW. Frederick and his siblings were then cared for by his grandmother Ellen Kelly, and uncle, Jim Kelly, at Greta for a time. Fred completed his growing up with the Forge family in Myrrhee and is warmly remembered to this day by both Patterson and Forge descendants as being a good young man.

Before he enlisted in the AIF, Fred was a bee-keeper in Myrrhee, being good mates with the five Forge brothers (L/Cpl William #2, Pte Leslie #17, L/Cpl Arnold #23, Pte Walter #24, Pte Leonard #51) and the two Patterson brothers he had grown up with (Cpl Archie #7 and Pte Allan #53), who returned safely to Myrrhee. Interestingly, Pte Forster provided four shillings of each pay to Mrs Evelyn Scott, Port Kembla, NSW. I assume Mrs Scott was one of his sisters.

Only two men from Myrrhee served as officers. They were Lieutenant Roy Bailey (*35, Royal Marines, KIA 5/1/18) and Captain Gerald Evans (*12, 8th Bn, DOW 20/9/17). Unfortunately, both paid for this responsibility with their lives. Evans was also the only Myrrhee man to be decorated. Gerald was recommended for the Military Cross three times, finally being awarded an MC for his actions at Second Bullecourt (8-9 May, 1917) in what was considered to be one of the fiercest hand-to-hand bombing fights of the war (Bean 13). Gerald was also mentioned in despatches for First Pozieres (24-28 July, 1916) and for leading a successful raid on 29 September, 1916, at Zillebeke near Ypres in Belgium.
The Evans brothers were fated to meet only one more time in this life and that was in Dernancourt, near Albert in France, on 21 March, 1917. Signaller Ken (Francis) Evans (*30, KIA 13/10/17) described the meeting in a letter to his mother written on 22 March, 1917:

I saw Gerald for a few minutes yesterday. I was marching through a village where his battalion had been billeted for four days and he happened to be standing on the side of the road, I couldn’t stop but we saw one another at about the same time, and he walked alongside me for a good way & we had a bit of a talk, I was more than glad to see him as I have been wishing to for some time & he looks really well. He was leaving there that afternoon and we are moving in the opposite directions at present.

The Official Diary of the 8th Battalion indicated that Gerald Evans was billeted in Dernancourt while Ken’s 51st Battalion was moving from Buire-sur-l’Ancre to Mametz on the way to the front line in the region of Vaulx-Vraucourt (28/3/17 to 13/4/17). Dernancourt is almost on a direct line between Buire-sur-l’Ancre and Mametz.

Thus, it turned out that all the men who enlisted from Redcamp – Sapper Ken Evans (*30), Captain Gerald Evans (*12), Sergeant Bill Usherwood (*20) and Corporal Jim Leslie (*26) – would make the ultimate sacrifice for both King, Country and Empire.

a The WWI honour board in the Myrrhee Memorial Hall notes that C Haynes made the ‘supreme sacrifice’, but this does not appear to accord with AWM nor The AIF Project records. In addition, B Hart who did make the ‘supreme sacrifice’ and is listed above C Haynes on the Honour Board is not so listed. I suspect the * was inadvertently placed in the wrong place on the Honour Board.
Acknowledgments

I would like the octogenarian elders of Myrrhee, Marion and Ian Flanigan, David Evans, Ernie Handcock and Vic Handcock, for their insights and suggestions, without which this article would not have been possible. I would particularly like to thank Ash Graham and Robyn Kigelour at the Myrrhee Primary School for providing access to the Myrrhee Primary School Honour Board, and Rick Martin (Moyhu Primary School) for access to the Meadow Creek Pictorial Honour Roll. I would also like to thank Neville and Donna Handcock, Kay Rowlands, Grenville Younger, Kaye Patterson, Dennis Nelson, Bruce Kidgell, David Waring, Faithe Jones, Lorraine Monshing, Karen and Bill Forge, Shannen Boyd, May Forge, Brad Campbell for assistance with identification and expanding on the stories associated with some of the Myrrhee men.
